Rotary World Peace Symposium Opens in Thailand

Article derived from Rotary.org

Emmanuel Jal began his keynote speech at the 2012 Rotary World Peace Symposium in Bangkok, Thailand, not by talking about peace but rather by singing about it.

The former Sudanese child soldier, now an international peace advocate and hip-hop star, energized the morning session crowd with his song "We Want Peace."

At the opening plenary session of the symposium, Thursday, 3 May, Jal talked about what peace means to him, the atrocities he witnessed as a child soldier, and the horrors he experienced while escaping Sudan's bloody civil war.

"Peace means different things to people all around the world," said Jal, a spokesman for Amnesty International, who has also worked on behalf of Save the Children, UNICEF, the World Food Programme, and Christian Aid. "Peace is when you leave home and come back safely. Peace is when you have a full stomach. For me, peace is justice, equality, and freedom for all."

During a breakout session later in the day, Rotary Peace Fellows discussed the successes of the Rotary Peace Center at Chulalongkorn University in Bangkok. Former classmates Erinma Bell and Charles Allen discussed the skepticism they felt at first about having much in common. Bell is a grassroots peace activist in Manchester, United Kingdom, and Allen is a police officer in Victoria, Australia.

"We've had rough dealings with police officers where I work," said Bell. "But I was interested in how [Allen's] police dealt with crime in his area."

After discussing ways to stem violence late into the night over tea, they both concluded they did have a lot in common.

“Eventually we realized that we did the same thing: we resolved conflict resolution through coproduction of communities, government, and nongovernment agencies,” said Allen. “Our professional relationship didn’t end when we left Chulalongkorn.”

“One of the more important things I took away from Rotary’s program was understanding the difference between peacekeeping, peace building, and peacemaking,” said Bell. “There is a difference, and it can be implemented in war and disaster zones, as well as localized urban conflict. I learned it’s not just talking about resolving conflict; it’s getting together and actually doing things that produce results. Rotary does a great job at highlighting that.”

The symposium, together with the Rotary Alumni Celebration, was held 3-5 May, immediately preceding the RI Convention.

This Week's Guest Speaker:

Bradley Johnson
"Cayman's Lionfish Control Program"

Bradley Johnson, is a Research Officer with the Department of Environment. He joined the Department as a summer student in 1993 and became a full time employee in 1997.

Mr. Johnson is a graduate of Eckerd College and has a Bachelor's Degree in Marine Science. Bradley has been involved with most of the Department's projects over the years, but his focus is now with the Nassau Grouper Spawning Aggregation study and the Lionfish Control Program.

Sunrise is Special!

Submitted by Rotarian Christine Mathews

It has been said before that Rotary Sunrise Grand Cayman is “special” and it needs to be said again Sunrise is “special”.

I was reminded of this as I spent the entire Easter weekend reviewing thousands of photographs taken at Club activities over the last ten years. This was in preparation for the slide show that was played at our 10th anniversary celebration.

There were pictures of Sunrisers at work – assisting other non-profit organizations including the Cayman Islands Cancer Society, the Cayman Heart Fund, the National Gallery and the Women's Crisis Centre; supporting those less fortunate in our community including recovery after Hurricane Ivan, the Sunrise Centre and the Pines. There are roadside cleanups, pond cleanups and so much more.

There are fundraising events including casino nights, car raffles and pyjama golf.

There are our involvement with youth and literacy projects with Rotarians reading with children one-to-one and in groups. There is CALS, Bright Start and donations of books to schools and of course there is our very own character development book. We have only to look at our Rotaract and Interact groups to see the positive influence we can have on the lives of our youth.

There is our commitment to health with the donation of several pieces of equipment to the Cayman Islands Hospital.

And then there is fellowship and we have had some remarkable fellowship events over the last ten years.

One thing is clear from all of these photographs – despite the diversity of our club in terms of nationality, religion, race, gender, age and profession all members are committed to contributing, as a family, to improving our community and always having fun in the process.

Let's always remember this and here is to another 10 years of great service, fellowship and fun.

Rotarian Christopher (Chris) Anco

Chris is one of those members who serve quietly in the background. But he is steadfast, dependable, capable, and sorely missed on the very few occasions since his induction when he has had to miss a Sunrise meeting due to work commitments or personal needs. Chris has single-handedly bridged a continuity gap in our Team Sergeant program by arriving at 6:00 every Wednesday morning and laboring long after most members have vacated Grand Old House, week after week after week...

All too often, people dismiss the importance of Club Service because its impact isn't noticeable by the local and international communities that are the PR focus of Rotary's efforts. However, we must all remember that Club Service is in fact the very first of the Avenues of Service - listed before Vocational, Community, International, and New Generations. It is only by taking care of the club that we can in turn care for the rest of the world. And Rotarian Chris Anco undoubtedly demonstrates "Service Above Self" in his commitment to the Rotary Club of Grand Cayman Sunrise.

Rotarian Barbara Anley

Barb has done an exceptional job as Director of Community Service. Although she has not been in the best of health this past Rotary year, she has managed not only to perform her duties as Director, but has also taken a personal interest in the community, in particular, Caribbean Haven, to whom she has taken upon herself to donate personally. As we are all aware, it is often difficult to get volunteers to participate in certain events and in some instances Barb has been alone attending functions and representing the Club. She has demonstrated a keen interest in our Club and Rotary as a whole.

Rotarian Dawn Cummings

Dawn has been a role model to many for many years. She is active in projects within the community and influences the lives of many. Her dedication to youth includes the reading programme at the High School and the Junior Achievement scheme. At the latter, she is a popular and well respected advisor to whom the achievers relate to exceptionally well, largely due to her approachability, empathy and compassion. She also assists with the Meals on Wheels and is the bright spot in the week for many of our senior citizens.

Dawn is also the Welfare Officer and we saw first hand how selflessly she performed her duties during the recent spate of illnesses and bereavements that befell our club when she was just as affected by the sadness and emotion of the tragedies, but still liaised with and consoled friends and family. Her humility and compassion are an example to us all and her commitment and dedication to Rotary clearly shows to others what "service above self" really means. Dawn is clearly a wonderful human being who has a calling to assist whenever she can. She doesn't seek fame or fortune or recognition for what she does and it is for this reason that the club should honour her exceptional commitment and dedication to our club, our people and our island.

Rotarian J D Mosley-Matchett

J.D. personifies the motto "Service Above Self" by doing consistently more than is expected of her. For her dedication, her commitment to Rotary, her leadership in the activities, for her help in the PolioPlus program, she was strongly recommended for a Paul Harris Fellow.

Mr. Michael Myles

In 2010, Mr. Myles was appointed as Programme Coordinator, Liaison Officer - At Risk Youth at the Ministry of Education, Training and Employment. The appointment affords Mr. Myles opportunities to advocate for resources for all at risk children attending primary and secondary schools in the Cayman Islands. He reached out to Rotary Sunrise Club for help and his immediate impact was his passion and commitment to the young people of the Cayman Islands; his passion for his job: it would appear that the job was waiting for someone like him. Michael promised accountability for our club's contributions to the Ministry's programmes. He presented a detailed description of the many programmes being prepared for the youth, along with a budget and timeline for implementation. Rotary Sunrise decided to contribute $5,000 towards the George Town Primary School Extended After-School Programme for "critically at risk" children.

Junior Achievement Recognizes Rotary Sunrise

At last week's club meeting, Director Deirdre presented President Andrea with a recognition plaque from Junior Achievement. The plaque is a token of appreciation for the club's work with local high school students this year, by sponsoring a Director Deirdre noted that despite numerous setbacks (including the withdrawal of both the company's president and vice-president), the Sunrise mentors helped the company maintain its vision and successfully complete the year.
